

Ethnographic Encounters Mini-Issue: Dissertation Pieces

Happy summer to all of you! We hope everyone had a great summer semester and is now enjoying their well-deserved holiday. Before this year's editorial team officially concludes its term, we would like to introduce you to our mini-issue.

Before the end of the semester, we called upon all final year students to submit short pieces about their dissertations – whether that was their abstracts, extracts from their fieldwork notes or pictures they took whilst during research. We are pleased to publish ten pieces that we hope will give our readers a flavour of the breadth of dissertation topics 4th year students researched and wrote on. We certainly enjoyed reading about the fantastic ethnographic work our authors have pursued and we hope you will too. Congratulations to all of our contributing authors!

We would also like to thank the graduating members of our editorial team for their efforts and dedication. We have been working on a few changes and improvements for the journal over the last year, some of which we unfortunately were not able to fully implement yet. However, we hope that the incoming editorial team will be able to benefit from and build on our work in the coming year.

On that note, we would like to introduce you to our new editors-in-chief for 2018/19: Rikke Nedergaard and Luke McGinty. We wish you, and your new editorial team, all the best for the upcoming year and a lot of fun with Ethnographic Encounters!

Bao-Chau Pham and Dylan Howel
Editors-in-Chief

Editors-in-Chief

Bao-Chau Pham and Dylan Howel

Editors

Ali Huntley, Jackie Ashkin, Luke McGinty, Rikke Nedergaard

OJS Support

Kyle Brady and Jackie Proven

With special thanks to the University of St Andrews' Department of Social Anthropology